LEASING HANDOFF AUDIT

Eight checks for your leasing handoffs

Find missing owners, vague statuses and work marked complete before the next team can act.

1. Keep one household reference

Link the inquiry, booking, application and signing record through one reference.

Ambiguous matches need human review, not an AI choice.

2. Name the source of each answer

Use approved property facts for replies.

Name who updates them after policy changes; polished wording doesn't fix outdated information.

3. Separate booked from attended

A calendar confirmation proves a booking, not attendance.

Record tour completion separately, with an owner and timestamp, before marking the showing finished.

4. Define an application-ready file

Define the information and documents reviewers need.

Missing evidence needs follow-up; form submission doesn't complete the file or approve the renter.

5. Separate evidence from the decision

AI extracts sourced facts.

Configured rules check criteria.

The authorized manager records the rental decision.

Criteria results aren't that person's approval.

6. Use confirmation, not assumption

Lease sent and signed need different statuses.

Mark completion only after the signing service confirms the correct application's event.

7. Give waiting work an owner

For unsigned leases or missing documents, record who acts next and when.

Failed delivery needs an exception, not silent waiting.

8. Don't collapse signing into move-in

Keep required funds, unit readiness and authorized access separate from signatures.

Agree applicable conditions with operations; the demo excludes these possession checks.

A REUSABLE WORKSHEET

Use this handoff record

Household reference.	Current stage.	Completion evidence.
Next action.	Owner.	Follow-up time.
Exception.

Fill one recent file's record; investigate empty fields.

SAMBHAV JAIN